DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after allowance or after an Office action under Ex Parte Quayle, 25 USPQ 74, 453 O.G. 213 (Comm'r Pat. 1935). Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, prosecution in this application has been reopened pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 02/16/2010 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 1-33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Sogard et al. (US 6139573).

Note in figures 1-6, a scaffolding (10) configured to define a substantially cylindrical member forming a lumen there through, wherein the scaffolding (10) having an interior and an exterior surfaces (11,13) and struts (17) with geometrical patterns formed by angles, wherein the angles determine the relative flexibility of the medical appliance such that the appliance conforms to the topography of a target lumen and when pressure is exerted along varying points of the longitudinal extension of the appliance, wherein the scaffolding (10) further comprises a polymeric coating material (14,19) coupled with the scaffolding (10) such that both the struts (17) and the area between the struts (17) are coated, wherein the coating (cover) (14,19) can be substantially hydrophobic, hydrophilic, or hydroscopic and furthermore, wherein the scaffolding (10) can be inserted into the internal diameter of the mold; applying a polymer to the interior surface of the scaffolding (10); and annealing the polymer to the stent by applying heat to the polymer.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

4. Claims 1-33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Reiss (US 6913617).

Note in figures 1-5, a scaffolding (100) configured to define a substantially cylindrical member forming a lumen there through, wherein the scaffolding (100) having an interior and an exterior surfaces (112,110) and struts (102) with geometrical patterns formed by angles, wherein the angles determine the relative flexibility of the medical appliance such that the appliance conforms to the topography of a target lumen and when pressure is exerted along varying points of the longitudinal extension of the appliance, wherein the scaffolding (100) further comprises a polymeric coating material (301) coupled with the scaffolding (100) such that both the struts (102) and the area between the struts (102) are coated, wherein the coating (cover) (301) can be substantially hydrophobic, hydrophilic, or hydroscopic and furthermore, wherein the scaffolding (100) can be inserted into the internal diameter of the mold; applying a polymer to the interior surface of the scaffolding (100); and annealing the polymer to the stent by applying heat to the polymer.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Dutta et al. (US 6702849) discloses stent graft is coated with polymeric material.
